Because of their physical and chemical properties, foods perform different functions which can be used in the production of food products.